IN FIVE GREAT PARTS

STORY OF THE PLAY

SHOMAS BRAINERD, SR., as a prospector, is a dutiful and loving husband and father. Two children, Gertrude and Thomas, Jr. are born while the Brainerds live in a log cabin in the mountains.

Brainerd strikes gold, goes to New York, where he becomes a financial power. He neglects his wife—devotes every moment of his time to his growing industries, simply supplies funds to his family—and his wife, alone and metancholy, is fascinated by an artist and consents to "alt" for a painting. Feeting her neglect keenly, Mrs. Brainerd becomes a victim to the wiles of the artist who, however, is killed by the husband of a former victim before the affair has progressed too far.

Brainerd, learning of his wife's affair with the artist, orders her from the house. Thomas sides with and accompanies his mother. Heretofore a worthless spendthrift, Thomas now becomes ambitious and joins interest with a penniless inventor goes west, establishes a factory, makes a go of it, sells out to his father at an enormous advance, convinces his father that his mother is innocent and, as he wansfers the invention to his father's arm, sees his mother in his father's arms, which example he immediately follows by proposing to the girl he has always loved. The story ends in an unconventional, happy manner.

DETECTIVE SERVICE BILL

Attorney General Gives County Figures

Burlington, Aug. 5.-In Windsor County from December 1st, 1912 to May 1st, 1914, the Wood-Morgan Detective Agency was paid for services two thousand two hundred fifteen dol lars and for expenses one thousand five hundred six dollars and ten cents, making a total of three thousand seven hundred twenty-one dollars and ten cents.

Covering the same time under the head of detective service the sum of four hundred twenty-six dollars and eighty-five cents was paid to local officers. Of the amount paid to the Wood-Morgan Agency, practically one third was in connection with the investigation of the systerious death of Eugene F. Carr, who was found dead October 1st, 1912 and in the investiga tion of State vs Drown charged with the crime of Rape. Practically all of this expense occurred before the pres ent Attorney General took the office but was paid afterward.

In all seven matters in Windsor County including those above referred to have been the subject of investigation by the Wood-Morgan Agency. Of these in one case (In Re Eugene F. Carr) no prosecution was instituted. In one case (in Re Drown) a not pros was entered. The other five investigations resulted in and convictions. I three of these sentence was to the State Prison, one to the House Correction, one to the County Jail In each of two case a fine of three hundred dollars and costs was im posed and collected.

The most important matter investigated in Windsor County was that o the death of Frank J. Tolby of Woodstock whose dead body was found in a corn field near Woodstock village about one month after his death This matter was investigated by the Wood-Morgan Detective Agency, Ir connection with this case the State's Attorney of Windsor County under date of May 18th, 1914, wrote the Wood-Morgan Agency as follows:

"The finding of the body of Frank Tolby in a corn field in Woodstock Vt., under circumstances which war ranted the belief that he had come to his death by foul means was a mos baffling mystery. I held an inques at which I examined sixty-three wit nesses. This inquest developed the fact that the last man seen with hir was George W. Briggs, who was in team with Tolby apparently headed for White River Junction, Vt., at quarter past ten on the evening of 25th. Briggs committed pur jury at the inquest so I had him ar rested on that charge and he was held in jail for the December term un der ten thousand dollars bonds, i was convinced that he either killed Tolby or knew who did, but could find no evidence beyond the fact that was with Tolby at the hour at said. If there ever was a case that warranted assistance of trained detectives this was one and with th consent of the Attorney General I em ployed your Agency and received from you very efficient service. After a most careful investigation it be came apparent to us all that the only way to clear up the mystery was to secure a confession from Briggs, and your operative Mr. Stearns, with the assistance of officer J. H. Ober and other County officials, skillfully of tained this result. The confession of Briggs made the crime manslaughter and the State under the circum stances was obliged to accept this

The above is a fair and unprejudic ed statement regarding this case Briggs is now serving sentence in the State Prison.

Another important matter in con nection with which detective service was used was the investigation of the escape of one Patrick McGowan from the State Prison with the assistance of one Laura Osmere. McGowan was finally returned to the State Prison and Laura Osmere, who assisted in his escape was prosecuted in Windsor County Court and sentenced to serve not less than one and a half years and not more than two years it the House of Correction.

The case IN RE Charles Batchelde: was also investigated by an operative of the Wood-Morgan Agency. Three indictments were found against thi respondent, one for obtaining funds by use of a fradulent check and two for embezzlement. To each of thes indictments the respondent pleaded

A small expense was also made in the case of State vs. Gerling. This man was an old offender and has nassed fradolent checks in several di ferent counties in this State. He was convicted in Windsor County and is serving sentence in the State Prison

In view of the serious nature of the matters investigated and the results obtained, it is believed that no just critism can be made regarding the use of detective service in Windsor

Respectfully. R. E. Brown. Attorney-General.

Action, Not Argument

A party of joy riders stopped Barre street last evening and according to reports of residents of that section of the city some members of the party were in an intoxicated condition. The car bore the number of : machine owned in the northern part of the state. So many machines have come through here in which rum intead of gasoline appears to be the motive power that the careful owners and drivers of machines about here are getting alarmed and believe that drastic measures should be adopted by the authorities.-Montpelier Ar-

This is the second time within couple of weeks that an opportunity has been given for the authorities of a Vermont community to make an example of the highway. menace, to wit, the careless, negligent, brutal, selfish or intoxicated automobilist and for the second time the opportun ity has been allowed to lapse.

What is wanted in such cases is ac tion not argument; punishment, not the recovery of property damage. An overnight experience in a Vermont county jail with a whacking fine for breaking the state law, is what is necessary to check some of this highway barbarism.

In the Middlebury case, the authorties apprehended the passing automobile menace and compelled him to ettle for smashing up a carriage, but failed to prosecuate him for breaking the law by operating his car in 4 careless and negligent manner.

In the Montpelier case under observation, nothing whatever seems to have been done except by the reportor who observed the condition of the joy riders. Section 8 of number 113 of the public acts of 1906 reads as follows:

Sec. 8. No person shall operate or attempt to operate a motor vehicle while in a state of intoxication.

There is no penalty attached to this section, but certainly any court would hold that intoxication was prima facie evidence of negligence, and certainly the statute provides sufficiently for taking away the license of an offender found intoxicated on his

It will not do much good for the newspapers to chronicle these hundreds of examples of careless and negligent running unless the local police do something and in the Middlebury and Montpelier cases there must have been ample chance for action.-Rutland Herald.
